THE BROKEN COIN

By EMERSON HOUGH.

(Continued from Yesterday.) By this time Kitty Grev had been rescued from the immediate peril which had threatend. When Count Frederick called out, the half-witted sailor turned toward him, and hesitated half an instant. With swift instinct, Kitty's fingers found a vulnerable place in her assailstant. With swift instinct, Kitty's ingers found a vulnerable place in her assailant's eyes, and as he roared in pain, she pushed herself free from him, and sprang down and back into the arms of Count Frederick, who caught her close, murmuring some words with whose meaning she was well content. "My heart, my life!" he exclaimed, even as he nushed her back of him and faced the strange being from whom she had escaped.

The noise of the oncoming melee behind them grew in volume now as Count Frederick turned to face the shagy figure of the man who but now had been the captor of Kitty Grey. The muzzle of the pistol pressing to his face spoke louder than any words—seemed, indeed, to restore to him a part of the reason he had lost through dwelling here among the savages, on a shore upon which he had been cast unknown years earlier. He threw up his hands now. "Avast, there, captann!" he cried. "I surrender!" "Who are you?" demanded Count Frederick. "Or what are you?"

The half-demented creature passed a hand across his face. "Blessed if I could tell you the truth about that, sir," he said, "and that's the truth. But seems to me I remember I was once Old Jimmy Wainwright, of the ship Adventure, out of Clyde. It's maybe we were cast away somewhere, sars since, and I'm thinking Adam was then a boy. Belay all! Friend, captain, your honor, don't shoot old Jimmy Wainwright, if so be I am him." "Hut what are you doing down here, under the earth, man?" "Captain, your honor, sir, I came here to live safe. I kill some of them black folks once in a while. They think I'm cray, and maybe they're exclaimed "You know this place" exclaimed.

How can I tell captain, your honor, sir?"

"You know this place" exclaimed Frederick. "Thus far we are safe, but listen to them coming."

"Ay, ay, sir, fighting like cats and dogs. They always do. We must can the highest fire yonder. Don't I know is in the big fire yonder. Don't I know I've seed sights a plenty up there. I couldn't a-beared to seen the white lady burned."

rade cable, which showed some animalike proof of human occupancy. We'll be safe fere, I'm thinking.

But they were not safe for long. The keen instinct of the savage trailers, hot in the blood lust which now possessed them, brought them on ultimately along the trail, and to its end. They heard the savage shouts of their pursues: the trail, and to its end. They heard the savage shouts of their pursues: Baliroon and interpretative dances. Davison's, Prof. & Wrs., 132D M nw. amonent, and the yelling band stood before the entrance to their cavern.

The natives were spearmen, and their rhafts were cast with streacth and accuracy. These beleaguered ones had no shields with which to parry saudious weapons, and yet for one instant a barrier was offered to the assault.

With a savage, half-animal roar, the ield sailor-whose full history never was to be known-cast himself in front of his new friend, opposing his shaggs breast to the level spears. He fell, pierced by a dozen shafts, still roaring his self-ance. Above his body now spoke again and again the weapon of Count Friederick. A half dozen dusky forms fell and filled up the opening. The savage hehind gave back and sought to flee.

This instant of their hostation gave Frederick one more opportunity. Catching Kitty by the arm he passed back to the rear of the little cavern in the hope there might be gyress that way-for surely the wall of steel in front could not be passed. He found it—a narrivo passageway. Panting and rising, the two hurried on until at length it became visible through a broken specture beyond which shone the full light of day. Gasping far on ahead, they saw a faint time of light, it deepened as they advanced, until at length the became visible through a broken specture beyond which shone the full light of day. There was no nath that they could see—the mouth of the cavern came out at the top of a high ellff. Far below them run the sea, blue tinged and rippling out to its horizon. But no sall broke the wide expanse, no path showed down the steen ducielly its which lay before them. Their case seemed dulte as helpless as ever it had been. If discovered now, they must indeed, stand at bay. indeed stand at bay.
